Description

We're beer people.

We are passionate about beer and the beer business. And are creating the best beer company in America. We're a company with high potential, a unique foundation of great beer brands and 288 years of brewing experience.

We're built from two highly successful, historically enduring companies. We have a strong leadership team; dedicated, hard-working people; and an insistence on building brands the right way, with a deep sense of responsibility to the environment, our communities, and those who consume our products.

We're focused on creating big ideas and innovations that drive profitable growth and create a new era in the American beer industry.

MillerCoors people are passionate about the beer business. We always work to do the little things that make a big difference for our customers.

We share a strong commitment to responsibly brew, bottle and market a portfolio of great beers that can satisfy all beer drinkers.

We believe our work is well worth doing, because it delivers enjoyment and celebration to customers. We enjoy our work, because it's fast-paced, creative and service-centered. And our work is fun, because we do it as a team.

MillerCoors serves customers using a three-tier distribution system. First, we sell our products to authorized distributors, who in turn sell to retailers. Our distributors have their own long traditions of providing great customer service—and great beers to retailers, and ultimately beer drinkers, all over America. And they share our commitment to the future.

There's one other commitment our people share. We believe in diversity and fair treatment on every front at MillerCoors. That commitment is unflagging. We recognize and appreciate our similarities and our differences; they bring creativity, innovation and new perspectives to our workplace, customers and brands.

MillerCoors is a young company building its corporate reputation. As we develop our own corporate identity, diversity and inclusion rises to the top of the list of defining qualities we strive to enhance.

We've built programs that help promote supplier diversity, a highly skilled and diverse workforce, and diversity awareness and education.
