Description

We have a story to tell

Our story is one of remarkable growth in size, quality, reputation and impact. In a little more than four decades, UAB has transformed from its modest beginnings as an extension center into a doctoral research university and academic medical center. And we have the same audacious vision that led our founders to dream big dreams: To educate, advance discovery, care for the sick, respond to the needs of our community and establish Alabama as a progressive economic center that can change the world.

Since 2013, UAB has been engaged in its most comprehensive strategic planning process.

We have accomplished much in these last few years to inventory our strengths and make strategic investments in our campus, IT and research infrastructure and programs to move UAB to the next level of excellence. In 2014, the schools and colleges, UAB Medicine and other university-wide foundational support units were charged with developing their respective strategic plans. Additionally, we have established a variety of institutional priorities and academic initiatives that are achieving excellence across our four mission pillars: education; research, innovation and economic development; community engagement; and patient care.

Diversity

Consistently ranked among the most diverse universities nationally by The Princeton Review.
