Description

Founded in 1906, The Madeira School is one of the nation's top secondary schools for girls. Located just outside of Washington, DC, Madeira enrolls 315 boarding and day girls from twenty-seven states and sixteen countries. The Madeira School is dedicated to providing girls with a top-notch education and the skills to lead lives of their own making. At Madeira, you will find an extraordinary faculty and staff that engage and challenge the minds of our students. Both the students and adults are learners and leaders. At Madeira, learning takes place at all hours of the day-- in the classroom, on the stage, on the athletic field, in the dorms, and in casual conversations between friends and with adults.

In our commitment to the mission of Lucy Madeira, we strive to empower and encourage the Madeira student to explore her interests, develop her abilities, act with self-confidence and compassion, and assume responsibility for her actions in the global community.

The Madeira School believes that belonging to a diverse private school community leads to responsible and compassionate citizenship in the global community. Madeira values diversity and is committed to honoring differences of race, ethnicity, religion, age, gender, sexual orientation, ability, and socioeconomic class.

The Madeira School works to expand and support the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, administrators, and Board of Directors in order to promote the broader education of all our constituencies, as well as the values of acceptance, inclusion, and respect. Such an atmosphere strengthens us as a community and our students as individuals and future leaders. Our School strives to create an environment in which all members feel safe and able to thrive.

Every year the Madeira Board of Directors recommit to the National Association of Independent Schools' class target principles of equity and justice.
